CITY LIFE.

Mr. PRINTER, I do not know what you meant when you urged me to visit town: you told me I should find the folks very clever, and see a great many fine things. I partly believed you; and yesterday paid a visit to my wife's half sister, Mrs. Tumbleup, who lives in Boston in a house jammed in among a great pile of houses, with a door-yard about as wide as a carrot bed. I got to town about ten o'clock in the morning; and on inquiring of a young fellow where sister lived, he told me to ride down — street to the corner of the green, turn round the printing office corner, and after down — street to Mr. —'s, turn round to my left, there she lived at the first house on the right hand, just at the head of — street. "Much obliged to you," says I — "now I know just as well as I did before." The puppy began laughing; and I was left to inquire again, or find my way alone. The next man I spoke to proved a little more civil — he went with me till he could point out the house, and then wished me good morning. I found sister's folks at breakfast, late as it was: they seemed glad enough to see me, but looked crooked at my old boots, and squinted like dragons at my leather breeches; and when I asked where I should turn the old horse, they went to the door, and pointed down street, told me that Mr. —'s stable was there. I thought plaguy odd seeing I had come cousting, however I began to think I must do as I was bid; so I scrambled away through the mud, and saw old sorrel safe in a brick stable as big as a meeting house. By the time I had got back to sister's and told wife's and children's love to her, and all that, the clock struck 12. I was glad to hear it; as I had eaten breakfast very early I began to feel pretty sharp set. However I had my longing for my pains; for not a bit of dinner did I see till after two o'clock — we then sat down to a fine looking piece of beef, but it was not half roasted, so I rose from the table about as hungry as I sat down. After dinner I was preparing to go down to the water side to do some business for my country neighbors, when sister told me I must be back by half past five to tea. I obeyed her punctually, and judging from our country practice, I hoped I should find some butter-cakes and ham, to make amends for my rough dinner. On my return to tea hour, I found several young folks at the house, who I supposed had come to see sister's eldest girl, Sophy. — When I first got in Sophy got up and made a curtsy, and told them that I was uncle Brushwood, and then told who they all were: but I have forgotten now, and besides I must hasten to tell you about my tea scrape — the very pickle of all plagues which this town visit has brought upon me. After we had waited about half an hour, a little negro came out of the kitchen with a towel tucked under his chin, lugging along a great platter, as big as a bread tray; I stared like an owl, and could not tell what to make of it. The platter had about a peck of tea cups on it, all full, besides a sugar pot, and I do not know what else; and to top off all, the puppy brought it right to me; I started back — the young folks tittered like a flock of black birds — sister scolded, and called out "brother don't drink hyson — I'd forgot it." The negro then carried it to the rest; they all took a cup off the platter, and first put a bit of sugar in it, and then dizzied in about three drops of milk out of a thing no more like a milk cup than a gridiron. They held their tea cups in their hands, and began to sip, red hot as it was. Sister said, "You'd better try a cup of our hyson brother, I guess you'll be apt to like it." I thought I must do as I was bid again, and so I tried to work it as the rest did. I got my cup into my hands, but I am sure it was hotter than the rest, for the very saucer burnt my fingers; and this moment along came the negro with another platter full of bread and butter. And now had you seen me, you would have pitied me from your soul — in one hand I held the tea cup, as hot as a warming pan, and in the other a great hunk of bread and butter; and for my life I couldn't tell which way to go to work to eat the one or drink the other. The sweat ran down my face with mere vexation; but at length as I was doleful hungry, I made a greedy bite at my bread, in doing this I tilted the tea cup in the other hand, so that sister's hyson slopped over on my fingers, and scalded me so intolerably that down went bread and butter, tea cup and all. The butter side of the bread fell spat on the knees of my new leather breeches, and the hyson after scalding my knee to a blister, ran down my boot to my very toe. Up I jumped and capered about the room like a bell sheep — the boys and girls ran out of the room and left sister and me together. I wiped my leather breeches while she was picking up the fragments of my tea-cup, and as she was carrying them into the kitchen, I seized my hat, took French leave, got old sorrel from the stable, and after a ride of five hours, I got safe home at 10 o'clock at night. I need not tell you our folks were dolefully frightened to see me return at that hour; that if you happen to call pretty soon, you may see my new leather breeches half spoiled; poor me limping round the house with a scald on my knee as big as a leather apron, and wife scolding like a bedlamite, because as she says I have disgraced the family. However, if I ever go to town cousting again they may ship me for a jack-ass to the West Indies.

Under the denomination of nervous disorders, are included several diseases of the most dangerous kind, and are so various that a volume would hardly suffice to complete a description of them. It pervades, with its baleful influence, the whole nervous system, writing the heart with inexpressible anguish, and exciting the most dreadful suggestions of horror and despair. To this demon have thousands fallen a sacrifice, in the direful transports of its rage. The most common symptoms of its commencement are, weakness, flatulency, palpitations, watchfulness, drowsiness after eating, timidity, flashes of heat and cold, numbness, cramp, giddiness, pains in the head, back and loins, hiccup, difficulty of respiration and digestion, anxiety, dry cough, &c.
